

JBG Architects – A 15 Year Contribution to Regional Landscapes

When launching JBG Architects in 1998, company director Jamie Gladigau recognised that regional clients deserved to celebrate their lifestyle and environment through exceptional design as equally as those living in cities and metropolitan areas.

This philosophy 15 years later stands true, with JBG Architects celebrating over 500 projects throughout the Barossa, regional areas of South Australia, Victoria and New South Wales.

From early beginnings as a sole operator, JBG Architects now employs a skilled team of professionals. Working with his wife and business administrator Shannon Turner, Jamie and the JBG Architects team has grown to now offer clients a complete “one stop” architectural service.

From family homes and commercial buildings to designing some of Australia’s most exciting wineries and award winning cellar doors including Hentley Farm, Murray Street Vineyards, Angove McLaren Vale, Shaw and Smith, Orlando Wines and Yalumba Wines, Jamie has worked with a diverse scope of clients.

“I have been privileged to work with Australian winemakers and local wine identities the likes of Robert O’Callaghan, Grant Burge, Brian McGuigan, Martin Shaw, the Angove, Lehmann and Casella families, as well as French winemaker Jacques Lurton,” says Jamie. “But equally as rewarding has been working with families who have made an investment in good home design,” he explains.

Jamie and his team have observed over 15 years how flexible planning and adaptable space has accommodated changing family dynamics, and also the added value of well-considered design to the assets and lifestyles of these families. During this time Jamie has also recognised changes in the way we live and work.

“We are experiencing a significant shift towards environmental principles and life cycle design. Clients today, residential or commercial, expect sustainable design to be integrated into their project,” he says.

The scope of project work has grown to include residential and commercial projects in the Riverland, Yorke Peninsula, the Southeast, Adelaide Hills and interstate.

“We have continued to link in with the natural landscape using local influences of wood, timber and stone,” says Jamie. “Over 15 years this use of natural materials has remained consistent in project design.”

Coinciding with the company’s 15th year, JBG Architects settled into a spacious workplace at 38 Murray Street, Tanunda. This new refurbished space reflects staff and client needs, allowing for a streamlined approach to architectural services and simplifying the sometimes complicated process of realising a dream build.

By offering a streamlined service JBG Architects aims provide its clients, regardless of size or budget, an accessible approach to regional architecture.

1998 1999 2000 2001 2002 2003 2004 2005 2006 2007 2008 2009 2010 2011 2012 2013

JBG Architects 1998 – 2013 Fifteen years of architecture working with iconic clients throughout Regional SA + beyond • Barossa Community Store • Barossa Enterprises • Barossa Valley Tourist Park • Blond Coffee • Kaesler Wines • Murray Street Vineyards • Peter Lehmann Wines • Rockford Wines • Seppeltsfield B&B • Tanunda Football Club • Turkey Flat Wines • Barossa Wine + Tourism Association • Heathfield Ridge Wines – Coonawarra • Kirribilly Wines– Clare Valley • Shaw & Smith – Adelaide Hills • Pettavel – Geelong • Casella Wines – Riverina • Yalumba Wine Co – Barossa Valley • Loom Wine – McLaren Vale • Islander Estate – Kangaroo Island • Barossa Council • Jacobs creek Visitor Centre • Ahrens Group • Grant Burge Wines • Tanunda Lutheran School • Barossa Valley Cheese Company • Beckwith Park • Marree Roadhouse • Plush Group • Schild Estate • Elderton Wines • Angove Family Winemarkers - McLaren Vale

A well designed building should fit you so that it feels uniquely yours.

– Australian Institute of Architects

Benefits of choosing an Architect

The decision to build or renovate, whether it’s your home or a commercial venture, will be one of the biggest single investments you are likely to make in your lifetime, and as with any investment you will want to maximise potential and grow its value. It is unlikely that you would consider any other similar financial commitment without thorough research and trusting the knowledge offered to you by a trained, qualified and industry registered professional.

Engaging an architect helps you achieve the right design solution that will improve both the value of your property and quality of life. An architect can design a space around you and your family’s lifestyle, now and into the future, or design a working environment for your business that will add value to your brand and increase the productivity of your workplace.

A well designed building will sit comfortably within a landscape and be planned to operate for best environmental performance. Designed specific for your site and orientation, an architectural plan means you won’t have to work within the compromises of a generic plan or poorly interpreted plan.

To be called an “architect” requires formal tertiary qualifications and a rigorous registration process. Builders, building designers and draftspeople cannot refer to themselves as “architects” without these qualifications, while registration gives a client peace of mind with the strict criteria expected of a professional.

Through their specialisation architects understand what makes good design, along with construction systems, planning and building regulations, engineering, environmental efficiency, and material science. Architects can relate the history of a site or region to be sympathetic with a project build.

Here’s a checklist of why to choose an architect:

- Formal qualifications and industry registration for peace of mind
- In depth understanding of the entire design, planning to construction process
- Unique and inspired design outcomes for your family or business
- Maximising the functional performance and environmental efficiency for long term, low cost operation of your space
- Setting and meeting realistic budget expectations
- Flexibility to stage construction to suit a client’s budget and timeframe
- Flexibility to offer input and source materials to suit a client’s budget
- Obtaining independent quotes for builders, surveyors, engineers, materials and finishes
- Monitoring the quality of finishes throughout your build
- Providing an higher long term return on your build

Visit our website to view 15 years of regional architecture.

www.jbgarchitects.com

P: 08 8563 1155

38 Murray Street, Tanunda